Magnesium gummies, named forms, zero oxide, on the front of the pack.

BUILT BY THE SANODE TEAM · MANUFACTURED BY SOFTPILLS
LIFESCIENCES, AHMEDABAD

01 — PROBLEM

Every magnesium gummy in India hides the number that matters.

— Compound weight on the label, not elemental content

"400mg magnesium" — almost never what it sounds like. A second Man Matters SKU shows the exact same ambiguity.

— A shared, unexplained bead technology

"MagnaSorb" — used by two Mosaic Wellness sub-brands (Man Matters, Be Bodywise), likely in-house branding, not independently verified tech

— Nobody has been lab-tested before getting caught

Man Matters was — and had already reformulated by the time results came out. A US magnesium gummy was FDA-recalled in 2026 for undeclared melatonin.

— No gummy — any brand, India or US — has ever been independently lab-tested

Checked directly against both active Indian testing platforms, 14 Sep 2026

— 02 — OPPORTUNITY IN MARKET

We don't have to invent this market. It already exists.

289

Amazon reviews on Man Matters' magnesium gummies alone — a proven category, not a pitch

Not a white space we're claiming. A thesis capital is already funding — in every format except the one we're building.

₹3,495

what Indians already pay to import Goli's weaker US gummy — real demand for a worse product

₹1.5 Cr

a VC just funded a magnesium-only D2C brand (Bubble Me, AJVC, Mar 2026) — no gummy SKU yet

03 — MARKET SIZE

Real, sized — and not "18–35 India."

₹685 Cr

TAM — India magnesium supplement market, 2025 → ₹1,100 Cr by 2034

India's top income decile is 74% of packaged-goods spend, 85% of beauty/personal-care spend — "masses does not mean business" (Kishore Biyani, Future Group). ₹899–999 only works if we're honest that this is who's buying: premium-reachable, D2C-literate, already a Man Matters/Be Bodywise customer.

The bet, stated honestly: sleepmaxxing is a peaking trend, not an established habit yet. Protein was a fad too, until brands invested behind it long enough to make it one (Marico's own CEO). That's the wager — not that the trend is permanent, but that we make it durable.

₹600–800 Cr

SAM — the sugar-free, premium, D2C-reachable slice, 2026

₹5–20 Cr

SOM — Year 3, directional. Modeled for a comparable D2C launch, not yet rerun for this exact product.

Two gummies. Named forms. Zero oxide. On the front.

Sleep, stress, recovery — the claim the evidence actually supports, not "most Indians are deficient."

- The evidence, cited precisely
2025 RCT: modest but real improvement. A Sep 2026 review calls overall evidence "low certainty" — we cite both. Two more trials (UCLA; a women's-sleep study) are running now.
- Glycinate over citrate/oxide, on purpose
Gentler on the gut; sugar-alcohol sweeteners can independently cause the same problem — flagged to Softpills directly
- Scales the way this category already has
A second SKU or delivery format once retention is proven — Bubble Me went balm→soak→tablet; Eight Roots stayed lotion-only. One hero SKU first, not several on day one.

55%

D2C survival floor to clear

Margin depends on one number: the Softpills quote. Targeting the low end of the COGS range closes the gap without raising price. A full 36-month cohort model at these exact inputs hasn't been built yet — the honest next step, not a guess.

Manufacturing & compliance: Softpills Lifesciences (Ahmedabad), a real CDMO — FSSAI/FDA claims self-stated only, not yet verified in writing. Eatroz applies for an FSSAI Relabeller license via FoSCoS — a "deemed manufacturer," doesn't own the line. Both license numbers go on the pack.

The barrier isn't the formula. It's getting lab-tested before anyone makes us.

— A formula is copyable. A trust record isn't

Naming elemental content and testing first is slow and boring to imitate credibly — that's the actual moat

— The real objection: "less potent than tablets"

A 112-upvote Reddit review of Man Matters' gummies, verbatim — naming elemental content is the direct answer

— This isn't hypothetical

A US magnesium gummy was FDA-recalled in 2026 for undeclared melatonin. Formulation integrity is a real, current risk in this category.

The move: commission our own third-party test before launch. Publish it. Checked directly — no magnesium gummy, any brand, has ever been lab-tested by India's two active testing platforms. We'd be first, not just careful.

A cheap trust mechanic, proven twice already: mCaffeine put its CEO's phone number on every box; Minimalist's founders personally answered 100% of queries for two months. Both real, both low-cost, both transferable here.

Same price as Man Matters. More credible than either.

Not the cheapest. Not undercutting anyone. The only one naming elemental content, chemical forms, and %RDA on the front — at a price the category already accepts.

MAN MATTERS — 5-IN-1		BE BODYWISE

The wider picture: at least 8 more Indian brands sell magnesium-for-sleep in tablet/capsule/powder form — none in gummy format. Two VC-funded, magnesium-first startups exist: Bubble Me (₹1.5 Cr pre-seed, Shark Tank India, already sells an oral tablet) and Eight Roots (topical lotion only). Neither has a gummy yet — that gap is the real opening.

D2C first. Prove it. Then add channels.

PHASE 0

Foundation

Relabeller license, NABL lab partner, Softpills quote locked, D2C site live.

PHASE 1

Prove the loop

One hero SKU. Nano/micro creators, not celebrity-tier. Welcome-kit offer — a functional gift tied to the dose ritual, framed as free, not percent-off. Gate: month-2/3 repeat $\geq$ 35%.

PHASE 2

Add reach

Amazon once reviews build trust. Quick commerce only once D2C margin is positive — the thinnest-margin channel, a trial layer, not the profit engine.

PHASE 3

Scale

Second SKU or format once retention is proven — not on a calendar date.

Botanical Clinical.

Sage and terracotta — the founders' own reference images, and a separate 15-brand packaging audit, independently landed on the same territory. Locked 14 Sep.

The actual shelf, not an illustration — live-captured 13 Sep.

Two tests pass. One risk is urgent.

●	Five-second test — brand, benefit, format at a glance	PASSES
●	Trust test — reads as a real dose, not candy	PASSES ON PAPER
○	Price test — ₹899–999 without a bigger carton	OPEN
○	Heat / fulfilment test — survives Indian distribution	OPEN

- Trademark — "Troz" is a real, live filing
Same category, active company (Troz Nutrition Pvt Ltd), Class 5. Attorney this week, not eventually.
- Fast-follower — now named, not abstract
Bubble Me: Shark Tank India, funded, already sells an oral tablet
- Softpills' bead tech and clinical-data claim
Unconfirmed — don't promise either on-pack until it's in writing
- Doctor pushback is live, right now
Mainstream Indian press warning on magnesium overuse — safe-use messaging is part of the product

Three approvals. Everything else follows.

- 1 Approve this identity as final.
Sage/terracotta, the wordmark, the motif — production proceeds.
 - 2 Attorney on the "Trozo" conflict, this week.
Real company, same category, live filing.
 - 3 Formal Softpills quote, ₹540 target.
Plus written confirmation on bead tech, clinical data, stability testing.

Downside capped at one production run — no further capital without the tests above clearing. Ownership split and structure written down before money moves.

Not the plan, just worth naming: the same companies flagged as fast-followers (Marico, HUL, Dabur) are also real, demonstrated acquirers of exactly this kind of brand once proven — Marico's own stated playbook (its Beardo acquisition) is buy a stake, let the founders keep running it.
